PRINTMAKING

2006-present

Master Printer and co-founder of Prints of Darkness, Brooklyn, NY

Prints of Darkness is a fine art collaborative printshop located in South Williamsburg, Brooklyn, since 2006. The shop operates on a contract printshop model where the artist works directly with master printer Rob Swainston on editions and/or unique multiples. The shop is equipped for relief, etching, silkscreen, stone and plate lithography, and digital inkjet printing -- specializing in layering several of these processes together. Our strength is identifying elements within an individual artists practice that synergizes with traditional and contemporary print processes.

Prints of Darkness has been fortunate to work on many projects with some fantastic artists. The shop has ongoing collaborations with Charline von Heyl and Dana Schutz. The 2014 Whitney Biennial has four artists who work with Prints of Darkness—Uri Anan, Jacolby Satterwhite, Emily Sundblad, and Charline von Heyl. Work produced in collaboration with von Heyl at Prints of Darkness was featured in MOMA's 'Abstract Generation: Now in Print' (March 15 – September

2, 2013). Cheyney Thompson, another Prints of Darkness collaborator, is also featured in this show. The 2012 Whitney Biennial included five artists who have worked with Prints of Darkness —Robert Gober, Reena Spaulings (John Kelsey, Jutta Koether, Emily Sundblad), and LaToya Ruby Frazier. The series Campaign for Braddock Hospital (Save Our Community Hospital) that Frazier exhibited in the 2012 Biennial were photo-litho/silkscreen prints produced in collaboration with Prints of Darkness. The 2013 Venice Biennale included prints by Gavin Brown artist Uri Aran produced at Prints of Darkness. In 2011 the shop produced a benefit print project, SKOWBOX, for Skowhegan School of Painting and Sculpture. Artists on this project included Robert Gober, Mark Grotjahn, Dana Schutz, Kiki Smith, and Kara Walker. The shop has also completed projects with Daniel Bozhkov, and Eve Sussman, among others. In 2012 the shop produced a benefit print for the Chinati Foundation with Charline von Heyl and a benefit edition with Dana Schutz and publisher Susan Englett for the E/AB Print Fair. In 2013 the Swiss print collective Schweizerische Graphische Gesellschaft commission the shop to produce an edition for DAS INSTITUT artists Kerstin Brätsch and Adele Röder.
